Objectives

The aim of this seminar is to gain a deeper understanding of important economic channels related to globalization. We revisit theoretical channels and discuss their empirical relevance. We do so by studying academic research papers.

Students learn how to work with academic research papers published by leading scholars in the field of International Trade. They gain experience in writing up scientific papers and in presenting their papers to a critical audience. Students acquire tools required to complete a Bachelor thesis under our supervision.

Assessment

To receive the credits, the following requirements have to be fulfilled: (i) presence in the seminar meetings, (ii) a one-page written proposal and a handout, (iii) a presentation, and (iv) a seminar paper. The final grade in the seminar will be based on the proposal (10%), the presentation and participation in the seminar meeting (30%), and the seminar paper (60%). Students should demonstrate their ability to explain the topics in their own words and their understanding of the economics of the arguments.
